BMI View: Our outlook for the Kenyan maritime sector is in line with that of the region - strong throughput growth forecasts as a result of robust economic activity and large-scale port developments. The continued expansion of the port of Mombasa, coupled with the imminent completion of the Lamu port, bode well for the development of Kenya as a strategic East African trade hub.

For 2015, we continue to hold a strong growth outlook for Kenya's ports and shipping sector based on three main factors: strong domestic growth in Kenya itself, a dynamic East African region (important because Mombasa acts as a trade gateway for many of Kenya's neighbouring countries) and, finally, continuing signs that Mombasa port's ongoing congestion problems are easing.
