Abstracts

Includes 3 FREE quarterly updates

The outlook for Oman's shipping sector remains mixed and reflects its main ports' specialisation. The port of Salalah is expected to post another year of strong growth and historic highs in total tonnage helped by increased demand for the limestone and gypsum it handles, while box volumes at the country's top container facility will endure another year of decline in 2015, affected by decreasing transshipment.

The port of Sohar, however, will enjoy growth both in terms of total and container throughput, largely due to the transfer of operations from Sultan Qaboos, although continued investment into new dry bulk industries will also prompt growth.
