BMI View: Robust private consumption and a booming construction sector will translate into growing demand for both passenger vehicles and commercial vehicles. We therefore forecast growth of 23.6% in vehicle sales in 2016, reaching 356,758 units sold by year end.

Key Views

Robust domestic demand, which is driving economic growth, will bode well for vehicle sales.

Low inflation and greater access to credit will benefit consumer spending.

Strong remittance inflows will support private consumption.

A booming construction sector, supported by a large PPP pipeline, robust property market and stable monetary policy, will drive growth in the commercial vehicle segment.
