BMI View: We see good long term potential in Thailand's commercial real estate sector as regional economic integration continues as well as continued growth in Thailand's tourism sector. However, recent political instability has had a negative effect, both on economic growth and FDI.

There are a number of strengths in Thailand's commercial real estate sector, these include a business environment which is favourable to foreign investors as well as Thailand's geographical location. A number of major international players are present in the market and Thailand also boasts a real estate investment trust (REIT), all of these factors point towards a sector which is fairly developed.
