In 2014, we expect Uganda to spend up to USD408mn on defence. This is a significant increase on the USD405.3mn that the country spent on defence in 2013. We expect the defence budget to rise to USD475.5mn in 2015, and then increasing once again to USD546.3mn in 2016. By 2018, we expect Uganda to spend USD754mn on defence.

Uganda has, at times, maintained a surplus as regards its defence trade balance between 2010 and 2013. The country commenced the decade with an arms and ammunition trade balance of USD8.9mn in its favour. In 2014, we expect the country to have a defence trade deficit of USD300,000, although this may reduce slightly for the remaining years of the forecast period (2015-2018) when we calculate that, on average, Uganda's defence trade balance will be USD200,000 per year.
