BMI View: It has been another tough year for Ukraine's shipping sector in 2015, with the country's ports only benefiting from the fact that grains exports are lifting total tonnage volumes. Container throughput remains stricken by Ukraine's deepening recession, with only the slight growth projected in 2016 offering any hope of box throughput growth returning to the country.

Ukraine's role in the global grain supply chain has ensured that total tonnage throughput at the nation's main ports has continued to grow year on year despite the country's overall dire economic outlook. Throughput volumes at the ports of Odessa and Illichivsk are forecast by BMI to rise by 5.4% and 11.4% respectively in 2015.
