We expect the UAE to spend up to AED90.8bn on defence in 2014. As with previous years since the beginning of this decade, we expect defence spending to continue to rise throughout the remainder of the forecast period until 2018. By 2018, we expect defence spending to reach AED113.3bn.

BMI has given the UAE an overall security risk rating of 82 for Q314. On average, the country has scored an overall security risk rating of 78 for the period December 2007 until Q314. We believe that the UAE has a comparatively low risk of becoming involved in a major interstate conflict, as the discussion below will illustrate. Similarly, it also has a low risk of suffering a major terrorist attack, and we do not consider the country to be at risk of suffering significant criminal activity.
