BMI View: The international reputation of Vietnam's real estate sector is steadily building. Increasing levels of foreign direct investment (FDI) are testament to the growing demand for commercial real estate space in particular, combined with accelerating economic growth and an improving regulatory climate.

Vietnam's commercial real estate sector is strengthening as it increasingly opens itself up to foreign investment. FDI into the real estate market grew to almost USD10bn in the first half of 2014, making it one of the largest recipients of foreign capital in the Southeast Asia region. Various factors have combined to pique the interest of overseas developers and investors.
