HEADLINE

On 9 Oct. the Ministry of Commerce announced to stop anti-dumping investigation against methionine originating in Singapore, Malaysia and Japan. The move may lead to China's methionine price remaining in the bottom.

Two drafts of industry standards for food grade L-tryptophan and L-threonine have been disclosed for public opinions by the China Biotech Fermentation Industry Association.

On 29 Sept., the MARA disclosed a national standard (consultation paper) for feed additive valine to solicit opinions from the public before 26 Nov.

On 13 Oct., the European Commission made an anti-circumvention final ruling against MSG originating in China, which means that its anti-dumping measures against China's MSG would be extended to mixture and solution with MSG content?50%, calculated by dry weight basis.

China's feed output rose steadily in Q1–Q3 driven by recovery of demand for pig feed and mass demand for poultry feed.

On 22 Sept., EIA report of Northeast Fufeng's glutamic acid efficient strain development and 200,000 t/a amino acid upgrading project was made public. With a total investment of USD50.2 million (RMB340 million), the project will produce 250,000 t/a glutamic acid.

Julong Biological intended to upgrade its current production lines so as to produce minor amino acids.

In Q1–Q3, Meihua Group's revenues from feed and pharmaceutical amino acids rose while that from flavor enhancers dropped.

Oct. saw a surge in corn price yet a slide in methionine's. Methionine price has dropped to a new low over the last three years, which was mainly attributed to domestic oversupply of methionine and sluggish market of its downstream breeding industry.

August witnessed monthly decrease in China's export volume and prices of methionine and lysine ester and salt.
