Abstracts

The Executive Summary of Production and Future Development of Niacin in China is from CCM's report Production and Future Development of Niacin in China, which is finished in July 2015.

Along with the public's increasing awareness of food safety, healthy dietary, environmental protection and green economy, the vitamin industry in China and the world at large has been attracting more and more attention.

The production of niacin in China has seen little changes in recent years. In detail, China's niacin output in 2012 grew by only 3.5% and it even had negative year-on-year growth in 2013. China's niacin capacity utilization rate has stayed below 50% since 2011. But the niacin consumption has witnessed changes and continued to grow in the past three years

The Executive Summary of Production and Future Development of Niacin in China briefs you an overview over production, producers, price and consumption of niacin in China and gives you a general outlook of the industry.
