Abstracts

With the development of global economy, green and healthy foods are becoming increasingly well-accepted. Under this circumstance, soybean protein products have been enjoying a blooming development in the last few years. At present, China has become one of the main exporters of soybean protein isolate. There are tens of producers of low-temperature soybean meal (white flake), which is the main raw material of soybean protein. However, not all of the soybean protein producers in China supply white flake. So who are the top 10 suppliers of white flake in China? And what is the situation of these suppliers, such as their production feature, supply ability, manufacturing cost, and control ability upon the upstream and value chain of soybean? In this report, we present the findings obtained from on-site research on the main suppliers with insightful analysis on the production, better understand of the value chain of soybean of them.

As to the raw material, China is also one of the biggest countries planting non-GMO soybean. Consumers in many countries prefer the soybean protein products made by such kind of soybean. What is the planting situation of non-GMO soybean in China? And how did it affect the price and output of white flake in the past few years? In the future, what will be the possible development trend of white flake's output and price? In addition, this report also provides information on soybean oil and high-temperature soybean meal, most of which are made by imported GMO soybean. So what are the production dynamics in these years? Is there any correlation between the price of them?

Integrated with site visits and opinion from related experts, this report is featured by the following highlights:

Dynamics of raw material of white flake

Dynamics of soybean oil and high-temperature soybean meal

Production information on white flake

Production situation of top 10 white flake manufacturers
