Executive Summary

The e-commerce market can be segmented on the basis of product categories (Fashion, Toys, Hobby and DIY, Electronic and Media, Food and Personal Care, furniture and appliances, and Others); and transaction type (Business to Business or B2B and Business to Consumers or B2C).

The global e-commerce market has increased at a significant CAGR during the years 2016-2020 and projections are made that the market would rise in the next four years i.e. 2021-2025. The e-commerce market is expected to increase, due to increasing internet connectivity, surging gen z and millennial population, rising penetration of smartphones, increasing adoption of m-commerce, rapid urbanization, growing acceptance of digital transactions, expansion in regional localization of internet content, elevating shopping experience, etc. yet the market faces some challenges such as rising malware applications, ambiguity with cross border trade, asymmetry in information (virtual vs reality), etc.
