Executive Summary

Apparels or clothing refer to items that are worn on the body. For the younger generation, apparels are more of a style statement and play an important role in enhancing their personality. Apparels are sold to customers through two types of distribution channels namely store based retail and non store retail. Online retail which is a type of non store retail is becoming the most popular distribution channel for apparels.

The global online apparel retail market can be segmented on the basis of type, component and industry. On the basis of end user, the market can be further split into men, women and children. On the basis of components, the market can be segmented into upper ware, bottom ware and others. On the basis of industry, the market can sub segmented into fashion, banking, warehousing and information technology.

The global online apparel retail market is expected to grow at a healthy rate during the forecast period (2018-2022). The market is supported by various growth factors such as the hike in number of smartphone users, lower prices compared to offline shopping, product variety and convenience.

The market faces some challenges such as rapidly changing customer preferences, high risk of inventory write offs and business operations getting affected in the event of technological disruptions. Preference to personalized shopping experience, escalating demand of apparels from Generation Z, launch of private label brands by online retailers and growth opportunities of online apparel retailers in Europe are some of the latest trends existing in the market.
