Executive Summary

Residential monitored security has become an important need of today's age with the people wanting to keep a track of safety of their property/assets/ dear ones at all times even if they are not present in their homes. It can be explained as a combination of input and output security devices. Some of the input security devices are sensors and actuators, whereas output security devices are hooter and alarms. Wireless locks and smart apps are also some of the latest additions.

The global residential monitored security market can be segmented on the basis of products, solution and residential type. On the basis of products, the market can be split into security cameras, sensors, security alarms, smart locks and fire extinguishers & sprinklers. On the basis of solution, the market can be sub segmented into audio visual surveillance, access control & management, alert system and intercom system. On the basis of residential type, the market has been split into independent and apartment type residences.

The global residential monitored security market is expected to grow at a healthy rate during the forecast period (2018-2022). The growth of the market is supported by factors such as increasing levels of urbanization, ease of installation of wireless security, rising labor force globally and hike in disposable income.

The market faces challenges such as intensive competition to major players from the smaller players, complex supply chain management and high dependency on sales of existing and new houses for generation of revenues. Increasing adoption of internet of things, ascending requirement for home security systems with remote access and hike in number of smartphone users are some of the latest trends in the market.
