EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Smart transportation refers to the use of several advanced technologies that aims to provide innovative services to different modes of transport. Smart transportation also enables users of different transportation modes to be more coordinated, better informed, and make safer use of transportation networks.

Smart transportation is a vertical application of Internet of Things (IoT), in which information and communication technologies are applied in the field of transport, such as car navigation, security CCTV systems, traffic signal control systems, parking guidance, etc. Smart transportation is considered very crucial for four major purposes, which include safety, environmental friendliness, productivity and efficiency, and better quality of life.

The smart transportation market can be segmented on the basis of solution (Integrated Supervision System, Ticketing Management System, Parking Management System, and Traffic Management System); application (Shared Mobility, Route Information and Route Guidance, Transit Hubs, Autonomous/Driverless Vehicles, Video Management, and Others); service (Cloud Services, Business Services, and Professional Services); and transportation mode (Roadways, Railways, Airways, and Maritime).

The global smart transportation market has increased significantly during the years 2017-2019 and projections are made that the market would rise in the next four years i.e. 2020-2024 tremendously. The smart transportation market is expected to increase due to evolving mobility market, rapid urbanization, rising investments in smart cities, increasing penetration of Internet of Things (IoT), favorable government initiatives for developing smart transportation, etc. Yet the market faces some challenges such as high initial capital investment, cyber security threats in smart transportation, etc.
