OVERVIEW

XmAb14045, also known as Vibecotamab, SQZ622 is a tumor-targeted bispecific antibody that contains both a CD123 binding domain and a cytotoxic T-cell binding domain (CD3). CD123 is a hallmark for hematological and lymphatic malignancies . XmAb14045 functions to “bring together” tumor cells expressing CD123 and cytotoxic T cells, which bind CD3. The T cells are then activated to kill the CD123- expressing target cells. It is a full-length immunoglobulin molecule designed to be dosed intermittently. The structural stability and modularity of XmAb Bispecific Fc domain has enabled the vibecotamab’s potency to balance anti-tumor activity with the reduction of immune toxicity that can result from T-cell activation.
