Research Summary

Cigars and cigarillos are both types of tobacco products, but they have distinct characteristics and are enjoyed differently. Cigars are larger, more substantial tobacco products made from whole tobacco leaves that are tightly rolled into a cylindrical shape. They are typically devoid of filters and come in various sizes, known as vitolas, with longer smoking times. Cigars are often associated with luxury and sophistication and are commonly enjoyed during special occasions or as a leisurely pastime. On the other hand, cigarillos are smaller and slimmer cigars that use a blend of tobacco leaves, often with a filter. They offer a shorter smoking experience compared to cigars and are more convenient for on-the-go smoking. Both cigars and cigarillos require slower, deliberate puffing to savor their flavors and aromas, as opposed to the quick inhalation of cigarette smoke. However, it is crucial to remember that both cigars and cigarillos contain nicotine and other harmful substances found in tobacco smoke, and their consumption carries health risks, making moderation and responsible use important considerations for individuals who choose to smoke them.

The major global manufacturers of Cigars and Cigarillos include Altria, British American Tobacco, Vector Group, Dosal, etc. The global players competition landscape in this report is divided into three tiers.
