Research Summary

Collagen casings are thin, edible tubes made from collagen, a protein derived from the skin and connective tissues of animals like cattle and pigs. These casings are commonly used in the food industry for the production of sausages and other meat products. Collagen casings are flexible, strong, and easy to handle, making them a popular choice for sausage manufacturing. They come in various sizes, diameters, and lengths to suit different sausage types, and they can be used for both fresh and cooked sausages. Unlike natural casings, collagen casings are uniform in size and do not require extensive preparation before use. Additionally, they are suitable for both manual and automated filling processes, which makes them a convenient option for large-scale food production. After cooking, collagen casings do not need to be removed, as they are completely edible and dissolve during the cooking process, leaving a smooth texture on the sausages' surface.

The major global manufacturers of Collagen Casings include Shenguan Holdings, Viscofan, Devro, Nippi, FABIOS, FIBRAN, Nitta Casings, Belkozin, etc. The global
