Research Summary

A Collateralized Debt Obligation (CDO) is a complex financial instrument that pools together various types of debt, such as bonds, loans, or mortgages, and then divides them into different tranches based on risk and return profiles. These tranches are then sold to investors. The underlying assets' cash flows serve as collateral for the CDO, and the income generated is distributed among the different tranches, prioritizing higher-rated tranches with lower risk. CDOs gained popularity before the 2008 financial crisis, but their complexity and the subprime mortgage crisis contributed to significant losses for investors and financial institutions. While CDOs can offer diversification and risk management benefits when structured and managed prudently, they also carry significant risks, and their proper evaluation and transparency are critical for investors and financial stability.

The major global suppliers of Collateralized Debt Obligation include Citigroup, Credit Suisse, Morgan Stanley, J.P. Morgan, Wells Fargo, Bank of America, BNP Paribas, Natixis, Goldman Sachs, GreensLedge, Deutsche Bank, Jefferies, Barclays, MUFG,
