Research Summary

Conformal coatings are protective materials applied to electronic circuit boards and other sensitive components to safeguard them from environmental factors such as moisture, dust, chemicals, and temperature variations. These coatings are designed to conform to the shape of the substrate and provide a thin, protective layer that acts as a barrier against potentially harmful elements. Conformal coatings can be applied using various methods, such as spraying, dipping, or brushing, and they can be made from different materials like acrylics, silicones, urethanes, or epoxy resins. The choice of the coating material depends on the specific requirements of the application. Conformal coatings play a critical role in enhancing the reliability and longevity of electronic devices, reducing the risk of failure and increasing their performance in challenging operating environments, making them widely used in the electronics industry.

The major global manufacturers of Conformal Coatings include Chase Corporation, Henkel, DOW Corning, Dymax Corporation, Cytec Solvay, Electrolube, H.B. Fuller, Herson, Kisco, Chemtronics, Europlasma NV, ELANTAS Electrical Insulation, ACC
