Research Summary

Cork flooring is a type of eco-friendly and sustainable flooring option made from the bark of cork oak trees. The cork oak tree's outer bark is harvested every nine to twelve years without harming the tree, making cork flooring a renewable resource. The harvested bark is ground and processed into sheets that are then fused to a backing material, often fiberboard, to create cork flooring tiles or planks. Cork flooring offers numerous benefits, including excellent thermal and acoustic insulation properties, making it comfortable and energy-efficient. It is resilient, soft to walk on, and provides a natural cushioning effect underfoot. Cork flooring is also hypoallergenic, as it resists the growth of mold, mildew, and pests, making it a popular choice for allergy sufferers. Its unique appearance, with natural color variations and patterns, adds a warm and inviting aesthetic to any space. Cork flooring is commonly used in residential and commercial settings for its durability, eco-friendliness, and versatility, making it a popular choice for environmentally conscious consumers seeking a stylish and sustainable flooring option.
