Research Summary

Corrugated pallets, also known as paper pallets or cardboard pallets, are an alternative to traditional wooden or plastic pallets for transporting and storing goods. These pallets are made from corrugated cardboard, which is lightweight yet strong and durable. The corrugated design provides structural integrity and load-bearing capacity, allowing the pallets to support heavy loads while remaining lightweight and easy to handle. Corrugated pallets are typically used in industries with strict hygiene or export requirements, as they are disposable, easy to sanitize, and don't require heat treatment for international shipping. They are also recyclable and environmentally friendly, reducing the need for wood or plastic pallets and contributing to sustainable packaging practices. Corrugated pallets are a cost-effective and versatile option for safely and efficiently transporting goods, particularly for industries that prioritize cleanliness, compliance, and sustainability in their supply chain operations.

The major global manufacturers of Corrugated Pallets include DS Smith, Smurfit Kappa, Conitex Sonoco, Milwood, Kitahara-Shiki Manufacturing, Nabi Ace, KraftPal, etc. The
