Research Summary

Dental CBCT (Cone Beam Computed Tomography) is a specialized imaging technology used in dentistry to produce detailed three-dimensional images of the oral and maxillofacial structures. Using a cone-shaped X-ray beam and a detector that rotates around the patient's head, CBCT captures high-resolution cross-sectional images that provide comprehensive views of the teeth, bones, soft tissues, and surrounding anatomy. This advanced imaging technique is invaluable in treatment planning for dental implants, orthodontics, oral surgery, and other complex dental procedures, allowing practitioners to visualize anatomical details in-depth, make accurate diagnoses, and enhance precision in treatment execution while minimizing radiation exposure.
