Research Summary

A DTG (Direct-to-Garment) printing machine is a specialized digital printing device used to directly apply full-color, high-resolution designs, graphics, and images onto various types of fabric and textiles, primarily garments like t-shirts, hoodies, and bags. DTG printing technology involves using water-based inkjet inks that are directly sprayed onto the fabric's surface, creating vibrant and detailed prints. These machines offer the ability to reproduce intricate designs with accuracy, color gradients, and fine details that may be challenging with traditional screen printing. DTG printing is often favored for small to medium print runs, personalized items, and custom designs, as it offers fast setup times and the flexibility to print one-off or limited quantities.

The major global manufacturers of DTG Printing Machine include Kornit, Brother, Epson, Aeoon, RICOH, OmniPrint, M&R, etc. The global players competition landscape in this report is divided into three tiers.
