Research Summary

Embossed carrier tape is a packaging material commonly used in the electronics industry for transporting and storing small electronic components, such as surface-mount devices (SMDs) like integrated circuits, resistors, capacitors, and diodes. It consists of a continuous strip of plastic film, usually made of materials like polystyrene or polycarbonate, with pockets or cavities embossed into the surface at regular intervals. These pockets securely hold individual electronic components in place, preventing them from shifting or becoming dislodged during handling, transportation, or storage. The embossed pattern is precisely designed to accommodate specific component sizes and shapes, ensuring a snug fit and preventing damage or contamination. Embossed carrier tape is often used in conjunction with a cover tape, which seals the components within the pockets, providing additional protection against environmental factors and electrostatic discharge (ESD). This packaging method facilitates automated handling and assembly processes, improving efficiency and reducing the risk of damage to delicate electronic components.

The major global manufacturers of Embossed Carrier Tape include 3M, Zhejiang Jiemei, Advantek, Shin-Etsu, Lasertek, U-PAK, ROTHE, C-Pak, Accu Tech Plastics, Asahi Kasei, ACTECH, Ant Group (Acupaq), Advanced Component Taping, Argosy Inc., etc. The global players competition landscape in this report is divided into three tiers.
