Research Summary

EPDM (Ethylene Propylene Diene Monomer) sealing strip is a flexible gasket or weatherstripping material made from EPDM rubber, known for its excellent resistance to weathering, ozone, UV radiation, and extreme temperatures. This type of sealing strip is commonly used in construction, automotive, and industrial applications to create a tight, long-lasting seal between two surfaces or components. It provides an effective barrier against moisture, dust, air, and noise, making it ideal for sealing doors, windows, hatches, and various joints in buildings, vehicles, and machinery. EPDM sealing strips come in various shapes, sizes, and profiles to suit different sealing requirements and are valued for their durability and ability to maintain sealing integrity over time, even in harsh environmental conditions.
