Research Summary

Expandable graphite is a specialized form of natural graphite that has been chemically treated to exhibit a unique property – it can expand or swell when exposed to high temperatures or flames. This expansion occurs as the graphite rapidly releases gas, forming an insulating and fire-retardant intumescent foam. Expandable graphite is commonly used as a flame retardant and fireproofing additive in various materials, including plastics, coatings, and construction materials. When subjected to heat, it swells to create a protective barrier, insulating the underlying material and delaying the spread of flames. This property makes expandable graphite a valuable component in improving the fire safety of a wide range of products and applications.

The major global manufacturers of Expandable Graphite include SGL Carbon, Xincheng Graphite, GrafTech, National de Grafite, Jinhui Graphite, Tianfeng Graphite, Black Dragon Graphite, Yanxin Graphite, Asbury Carbons, Durrans Group, AMG (GK), Maas Graphite, Tianheda Graphite, Haida Graphite, HP Materials Solutions, Nippon Graphite, etc. The global players competition landscape in this report is divided into three tiers.

The first tier comprises global leading enterprises that command a substantial market share, hold a dominant industry position, possess strong competitiveness and influence, and generate significant revenue. The second tier includes companies with a notable market presence and reputation; these firms actively follow industry leaders in product, service, or technological innovation and maintain a moderate revenue scale. The third tier consists of smaller companies with limited market share and lower brand recognition, primarily focused on local markets and generating comparatively lower revenue.
