Research Summary

Formwork refers to the temporary or permanent molds or structures used in construction to shape and support concrete until it sets and becomes self-supporting. This framework is crucial in creating the desired shape and dimensions of concrete structures, such as walls, columns, beams, and slabs. Formwork systems can be made from various materials, including timber, plywood, steel, aluminum, or prefabricated plastic. The choice of formwork material depends on factors such as the type of construction, budget constraints, and the desired finish of the concrete surface. Formwork must be robust enough to withstand the weight and pressure of fresh concrete while maintaining the intended shape and alignment until the concrete achieves sufficient strength. Once the concrete has cured, the formwork is removed, leaving behind the hardened structure. Formwork is a key component in the construction process, playing a crucial role in ensuring the structural integrity and quality of concrete elements in buildings and infrastructure projects.

The major global manufacturers of Formwork include PERI, Doka, BEIS, ULMA, Alsina, Acrow, Acrowmisr, PASCHAL, NOE, RMD Kwikform, Intek, Condor, Waco International,
