Research Summary

Galvannealed steel is a type of steel that has undergone a specific heat-treatment process after being coated with zinc through the galvanization process. In this method, the steel is first hot-dip galvanized to apply a zinc coating, and then it undergoes a heat treatment, typically in a furnace, which allows the zinc to alloy with the steel surface. This process creates a zinc-iron alloy layer on the steel, resulting in a product with enhanced corrosion resistance and improved paint adhesion. Galvannealed steel is known for its matte finish and is commonly used in applications where both corrosion resistance and paintability are critical, such as in the automotive industry for manufacturing parts like car bodies, as well as in construction for various components requiring a durable and paintable surface.

The major global manufacturers of Galvannealed Steel include ArcelorMittal, Baowu Group, Steel Dynamics, ThyssenKrupp, POSCO, Youfa Steel Pipe Group, Nippon Steel, Hesteel Group, Hyundai Steel, JFE Steel Corporation, Shougang, United States Steel Corporation, Ansteel Group, Benxi Steel Group, Gerdau, Maanshan Steel, China
