Research Summary

Grape seed oil is a cooking oil that is extracted from the seeds of grapes, usually the byproduct of winemaking. This oil is light in color and flavor, with a mild, slightly nutty taste. It is prized for its high smoke point, making it suitable for various culinary applications, including frying, saut?ing, and salad dressings. Additionally, grape seed oil is known for its potential health benefits, attributed to its composition of polyunsaturated fats, particularly omega-6 fatty acids, and antioxidants such as vitamin E. Some people also use grape seed oil in skincare products due to its light texture and potential skin-nourishing properties.
