Research Summary

Graphite fluoride refers to a compound where fluorine atoms replace some or all of the hydrogen or carbon atoms in the graphite structure. It is a type of intercalation compound formed by the reaction between fluorine gas and graphite. The resulting material exhibits unique properties, including increased electrical conductivity, thermal stability, and chemical resistance. Graphite fluoride is employed in various applications, such as lubricants, batteries, and as a precursor in the production of graphene fluoride. The controlled fluorination of graphite allows for the modification of its physical and chemical characteristics, tailoring the material for specific industrial uses. This compound's properties make it valuable in diverse fields where enhanced conductivity, thermal stability, and resistance to chemical reactions are desired.

The major global manufacturers of Graphite Fluoride include Daikin Industries, Central Glass, Hubei Zhuoxi Fluorochemical, Zhongshan Photoelectric Materials, Nanjing XFNANO Materials, ACS MATERIAL, etc. The global players competition landscape in this report is divided into three tiers.
