Research Summary

A gravel paver is a specialized construction system designed for creating stable and permeable surfaces using gravel or aggregate material. It typically consists of interlocking units or grids made from materials like plastic, concrete, or geotextiles. These pavers are installed over a prepared base, allowing for the retention of gravel within the open spaces, creating a durable and load-bearing surface. Gravel pavers are commonly used in landscaping, driveway construction, and erosion control projects. They offer advantages such as improved stormwater management by allowing water to penetrate the surface, reducing runoff and preventing soil erosion. Gravel pavers also provide a stable foundation for vehicles and pedestrians while maintaining the aesthetic appeal of a gravel surface. This solution is popular in sustainable and environmentally conscious construction practices due to its ability to balance functionality with ecological considerations.

The major global manufacturers of Gravel Paver include Vogele, VOLVO, Dynapack, ST Engineering, Bomag, CAT, XCMG, Ammann, SUMITOMO, SANY, ZOOMLION, SCMC, Tsun Greatwall, HANTA, etc. The global players competition landscape in this
