Research Summary

Ham and bacon are two popular types of cured pork products that undergo different methods of preparation and have distinct flavors and textures. Ham is typically made from the hind leg of a pig and can be either dry-cured or wet-cured. Dry-cured hams, such as prosciutto and country hams, are preserved with a mixture of salt and sometimes other seasonings, while wet-cured hams are brined in a liquid solution. Bacon, on the other hand, is typically made from pork belly and is cured with a mixture of salt, sugar, and sometimes additional flavorings. It is often smoked after curing, giving it a characteristic savory and smoky flavor. While ham is commonly served cooked and sliced, bacon is usually sliced thin and cooked until crispy.
