Research Summary

Lactulose concentrate is a form of lactulose, a synthetic disaccharide sugar commonly used as a medication to treat constipation and hepatic encephalopathy. Lactulose concentrate is a liquid formulation that typically contains a higher concentration of lactulose compared to other forms. It is administered orally and acts by promoting an osmotic effect in the colon, softening stools and facilitating bowel movements, making it effective in relieving constipation. Additionally, in the management of hepatic encephalopathy, lactulose concentrate helps reduce ammonia levels in the colon by promoting the growth of beneficial bacteria that metabolize ammonia. Lactulose concentrate provides a convenient and easily dosable form of lactulose for individuals requiring treatment for constipation or liver conditions associated with hepatic encephalopathy.
