Research Summary

Masonry white cement is a specialized type of cement that is primarily used in masonry applications where a white or light-colored finish is desired. It is similar to regular gray cement in terms of composition and function, but it contains a higher percentage of white materials such as limestone, clay, and gypsum. The presence of these white materials gives the cement its distinctive white appearance when mixed with water and applied. Masonry white cement is commonly used for architectural projects such as decorative concrete, stucco, plaster, and tile grouting, where the aesthetic appeal and color uniformity are important. It provides a clean, bright, and smooth finish that can be easily pigmented or tinted for customization. The properties of masonry white cement, including strength, workability, and durability, are similar to standard cement, making it a suitable choice for various masonry applications with specific color requirements.

The major global manufacturers of Masonry White Cement include Cementir Holding, LafargeHolcim, Federal White Cement, Royal White Cement, Sesco Cement Corp., Titan America, etc. The global players competition landscape in this report is divided
