Research Summary

Mothballs are small, solid balls or flakes containing a chemical compound called naphthalene or sometimes paradichlorobenzene. They are primarily used to repel and deter moths, as well as other insects and pests, from damaging clothing, fabrics, and stored items. Mothballs work by releasing a strong odor that is unpleasant and repelling to moths. When placed in closed spaces, such as closets or garment storage containers, the vapors from the mothballs create an environment that moths find inhospitable. This discourages them from laying eggs or feeding on fabrics, thus minimizing the risk of damage caused by moth larvae. It's important to use mothballs according to the manufacturer's instructions and avoid placing them near food, children, or pets, as they can be toxic if ingested or inhaled in large quantities. Proper ventilation is crucial when using mothballs, as the odor can be potent and may require airing out the treated area before use.

The major global manufacturers of Mothballs include Willert Home Products, Hakugen, Farcent Enterprise, Bagus Group, Iching Corporation, Recochem, Hovex, HuaYuan Chemical, Supreme Industries, Greensky, etc. The global players competition
