Research Summary

Natural graphite and synthetic graphite are two types of carbon-based materials with distinct characteristics and production methods. Natural graphite is a mineral that is mined from deposits in various parts of the world. It is composed of layers of carbon atoms arranged in a hexagonal lattice structure. Natural graphite can be further categorized into two types: flake graphite and amorphous graphite. Flake graphite is characterized by thin, flat flakes, whereas amorphous graphite has a more disordered structure. Natural graphite is valued for its high carbon content, thermal and electrical conductivity, lubricating properties, and chemical stability. It finds applications in industries such as batteries, refractories, lubricants, and electrodes.

On the other hand, synthetic graphite is manufactured through a complex process called graphitization. It begins with carbon-containing materials, typically petroleum coke or coal tar pitch, being subjected to high temperatures and pressures. This process rearranges the carbon atoms and creates a highly ordered structure similar to natural graphite. Synthetic graphite has properties that can be tailored to specific applications, such as high purity, consistent grain size, and excellent thermal conductivity. It is commonly used in the production of electrodes for electric arc furnaces, lithium-ion batteries, and high-temperature applications.

While both natural and synthetic graphite have their respective uses, synthetic graphite offers more control over its properties and can exhibit superior performance in certain applications. However, natural graphite remains important due to its abundance, lower cost, and specific properties that make it suitable for certain industries.

The major global manufacturers of Natural & Synthetic Graphite include South Sea Graphite, Haida Graphite, Yixiang Group, BTR, National de Grafite, Northeast Asia Mineral Resources, Aoyu Graphite Group, Xincheng New Material, SGL, Tiansheng Nonmetal Industry, Xinghe Graphite, Heijin Graphite, Imerys Graphite and Carbon, Jinhua Feng Graphite, Agrawal Graphite Industries, Fangda Carbon, Graphit Kropfmuhl, Grafitbergbau Kaisersberg, Fuda Graphite, Fenlu Graphite, Black Dragon Graphite, Huangyu Graphite, Koh-i-Noor Grafite Sro, Puchen Graphite, Tirupati Graphite, Xincheng Graphite, Jinhui Graphite, Yanxin Graphite, Shida Carbon, etc. The global players competition landscape in this report is divided into three tiers.
