Research Summary

Precipitated barium sulfate is a synthetic form of barium sulfate, a white crystalline compound. It is produced through a chemical precipitation process where barium ions in a solution react with sulfate ions to form solid barium sulfate. This method allows for precise control over particle size, shape, and distribution, resulting in a finely divided, high-purity product. Precipitated barium sulfate is valued for its unique combination of properties, including high chemical inertness, insolubility in water, and radiopacity. These characteristics make it a versatile material with applications in industries such as paints, coatings, plastics, rubber, and pharmaceuticals. In the paint and coating industry, for instance, precipitated barium sulfate serves as a functional filler, enhancing product performance and durability. Its use extends to various sectors where a combination of specific physical, chemical, and optical properties is required.

The major global manufacturers of Precipitated Barium Sulfate include Cimbar, Huntsman, Solvay, Barium & Chemicals, Jiaxin Chemical, Sakai Chemical, Fuhua Chemical, NaFine, Xinji Chemical, Onmillion Nano Material, Nippon Chemical Industry,
