Research Summary

A shark fin antenna is a type of antenna commonly used on vehicles for radio reception, particularly for FM radio and GPS signals. Resembling the shape of a shark's dorsal fin, these antennas are aerodynamic and typically mounted on the roof of the vehicle. Apart from their functional purpose of receiving radio signals, shark fin antennas are also chosen for their aesthetic appeal, as they provide a sleek and modern look to the vehicle compared to traditional whip antennas. Many modern vehicles come equipped with shark fin antennas as standard or optional features, and they are often integrated with other vehicle systems, such as cellular antennas for GPS navigation and communication services.
