Research Summary

SIBS, or styrene-isobutylene-styrene, is a type of thermoplastic elastomer (TPE) known for its unique combination of flexibility, durability, and biocompatibility. It is composed of a styrene-isobutylene-styrene block copolymer, which gives it rubber-like properties such as elasticity and resilience, along with the processability of a thermoplastic material. SIBS is often used in medical device applications due to its excellent biocompatibility, low toxicity, and resistance to body fluids and chemicals. It can be easily molded or extruded into various shapes and forms, making it suitable for applications such as catheters, tubing, wound dressings, and medical implants. Additionally, SIBS exhibits good clarity and colorability, making it an attractive choice for transparent or colored medical products.
