Research Summary

Silicon-32 (Si-32) is a radioactive isotope of silicon with a half-life of approximately 172 years. It is produced primarily through cosmic ray interactions with argon in the Earth's atmosphere and decays by beta emission into phosphorus-32 (P-32). Silicon-32 is used as a tracer in environmental and geological studies to investigate the movement of sediments, the dating of glacial ice, and the study of biogeochemical processes in marine and terrestrial environments. Due to its relatively long half-life and ability to track silicon cycling in natural systems, Si-32 provides valuable insights into understanding long-term environmental changes and sediment dynamics.

The major global manufacturers of Silicon 32 include NIDC(DOE IP), LANL(Los Alamos National Lab), TRIUMF, etc. The global players competition landscape in this report is divided into three tiers.
