Research Summary

Sodium selenite ( $\text{Na}_2\text{SeO}_3$ ) is an inorganic compound and a source of the essential trace element selenium. It is typically found as a white or colorless crystalline solid that is soluble in water. Sodium selenite is primarily used in dietary supplements and animal feed to provide selenium, which is crucial for various biological functions, including antioxidant defense, thyroid hormone metabolism, and immune system support. In agriculture, it is applied to soil as a selenium fertilizer to improve plant selenium content and enhance crop nutrition. Sodium selenite also finds application in the glass industry for imparting a red color to glass, as well as in certain chemical processes and as a reagent in laboratory settings. While selenium is essential for health, excessive intake of sodium selenite can be toxic, necessitating careful dosing and regulation in dietary supplements and agricultural applications to ensure safe consumption and environmental stewardship.

The major global manufacturers of Sodium Selenite include Vital, Retorte, II-VI, Orffa, Jinhua, Omkar, etc. The global players competition landscape in this report is divided
