Research Summary

Sodium sulphite (Na_2SO_3) is a white crystalline solid that dissolves readily in water to form a mildly alkaline solution. It is primarily used as a preservative and antioxidant in various industries, including food and beverage, photography, and water treatment. In the food industry, sodium sulphite prevents the growth of bacteria and fungi, thereby extending the shelf life of perishable foods such as dried fruits, wines, and seafood. It is also utilized in winemaking to inhibit oxidation and preserve the flavor and color of wines. In photography, sodium sulphite is a key ingredient in developer solutions, where it acts as a reducing agent to convert exposed silver halide crystals into metallic silver. In water treatment, sodium sulphite serves as a dechlorination agent, removing residual chlorine from water supplies to prevent damage to pipes and equipment. While generally recognized as safe (GRAS) in small quantities, excessive consumption or exposure to sodium sulphite can cause adverse reactions in sensitive individuals, necessitating careful regulation in food and beverage applications.

The major global manufacturers of Sodium Sulphite include INEOS Calabrian, Solvay, Aditya Birla Chemicals, Esseco Group, BASF, Sanxiang Chemical, Merck Millipore, PENTA, JAY DINESH CHEMICALS, Haolin, Sichuan Xinxing Chemical, Aoke Chemical, Borden & Remington Corporation, etc. The global players competition landscape in this report is divided into three tiers.
