Research Summary

A stand-up paddle boarding (SUP) paddle is a specialized tool used to propel a stand-up paddle board through the water. It consists of three main parts: the handle, the shaft, and the blade. The handle, often T-shaped or ergonomic, provides a comfortable grip. The shaft, made from materials like aluminum, fiberglass, or carbon fiber, is lightweight yet sturdy, offering optimal strength and flexibility. The blade, typically made from plastic, fiberglass, or carbon fiber, is designed to efficiently displace water with each stroke, featuring a slight curve or angle for improved propulsion. The length of the paddle is adjustable or chosen to match the paddler's height and paddling style, ensuring effective and comfortable use.
