Research Summary

Steel rainbow flatware refers to a set of eating utensils made from stainless steel that features a colorful, rainbow-like finish. Typically, these utensils are coated with a thin layer of titanium nitride through a process called physical vapor deposition (PVD). This coating gives the stainless steel a spectrum of colors, ranging from blue, purple, and green to gold and rose gold, resembling the colors of a rainbow. Steel rainbow flatware combines the durability and functionality of stainless steel with the aesthetic appeal of vibrant colors, making them a popular choice for modern table settings and special occasions. They add a touch of style and personality to dining experiences, whether at home, in restaurants, or at events. Additionally, the titanium nitride coating provides extra protection against corrosion and scratching, ensuring the longevity of the flatware.
