Research Summary

Takaful is a type of Islamic insurance based on the principles of mutual cooperation, shared responsibility, and risk-sharing. In contrast to conventional insurance, which involves transferring risk from the insured to the insurer in exchange for a premium, takaful operates on the concept of participants contributing funds into a pool to collectively cover potential losses or damages. In the event of a covered loss, participants are compensated from the pool of funds according to the principles of fairness and equity. Takaful adheres to Shariah (Islamic law) guidelines, which prohibit the use of interest (riba), uncertainty (gharar), and gambling (maysir) in financial transactions. The operation of takaful is overseen by a Shariah advisory board to ensure compliance with Islamic principles.
