Research Summary

A television (TV) mount, also known as a TV bracket or TV wall mount, is a device used to securely attach a television to a wall or other surface. It allows the TV to be mounted in a fixed position or adjusted for optimal viewing angles. TV mounts typically consist of a metal frame or bracket that attaches to the back of the television and mounting hardware (such as screws and bolts) for securing the bracket to the wall. There are various types of TV mounts available, including fixed mounts, tilt mounts, swivel mounts, and full-motion mounts, each offering different degrees of adjustability and flexibility. Fixed mounts hold the TV flush against the wall, while tilt mounts allow the TV to be angled up or down for better viewing from different seating positions. Swivel mounts enable the TV to be rotated horizontally, and full-motion mounts provide the most flexibility, allowing the TV to be tilted, swiveled, and extended away from the wall. TV mounts are commonly used in homes, offices, commercial establishments, and public spaces to save space, enhance viewing experiences, and improve aesthetics by eliminating the need for bulky TV stands or furniture.
