Research Summary

A Three Seasons Sunroom, also known as a three-season room or porch, is a home extension designed to provide a comfortable living space that can be used during three out of the four seasons—spring, summer, and fall. Unlike a four-season or all-season room, a three seasons sunroom is typically not equipped with a heating system, making it less suitable for use during the colder winter months. These sunrooms are enclosed with windows or screens to allow for ventilation while protecting against insects and the elements. They are versatile spaces that offer a connection to the outdoors, allowing occupants to enjoy natural light and views of the surrounding landscape. Three seasons sunrooms are popular additions to homes, providing a semi-outdoor space for relaxation, dining, or entertaining while being sheltered from inclement weather.
