Abstracts

Mexico cereal crop production volumes experienced a setback in 2018, subdued by lower-than-expected harvested area and some harvest limitations caused by weather conditions. According to FAO, the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organisation, total wheat output in Mexico contracted by 15% in 2018 to amount to approximately three million tonnes after a good previous year's output, after wheat farmers switched parts of the planting areas to more drought-resistant crops when faced with water shorta...
