Abstracts

Unlike other European countries, Sweden did not impose major lockdown restrictions on households and businesses due to COVID-19, instead advising its citizens to observe social distancing measures, limit travel and avoid major gatherings in public places. Nevertheless, these, as well as other measures imposed on on-trade outlets, led to reduced footfall in bars and restaurants, contributing to a decline in on-trade alcoholic drinks sales in 2020, and therefore also a big fall in packaging unit v...
